9Health Fair Teams-Up With the “NinjaDoc” this Fall

Denver, CO- American Ninja Warriors top contestant, Noah Kaufman, MD, has joined forces with 9Health Fair as a spokesman and ambassador. Kaufman, dubbed the “NinjaDoc”, is an emergency room doctor from Fort Collins, CO, and has appeared on three seasons of the NBC show American Ninja Warriors.

Kaufman and his training group, The Wolfpack, are focused on fighting childhood obesity by inspiring kids and families to take action to be healthy which is 100 percent aligned with the mission of 9Health Fair.

“I couldn’t be more excited to partner with a great, well-respected organization like 9Health Fair,” Kaufman said. “Our visions of community health are aligned, and I will be joining the health fairs around Denver this fall and spring. Additionally, 9Health Fair will be joining our exciting family-based Wolfpack Ninja Tour event in Denver this coming April along with all of the top Ninjas. Together, we are helping people to own their health and it's very exciting.”

The fall 9Health Fair season runs through November 19, and each location offers health screenings that are more comprehensive, more affordable and give the choice to you instead of your insurance plan. In addition, flu shots for the whole family are convenient and affordable.

“Our fall 9Health Fair season tends to have more of a family focus, which is why our partnership with the NinjaDoc is so powerful,” said Marte Meyer, Interim CEO of 9Health Fair. “The impact he is having on the health of Colorado families and kids is something we can all get behind, and we’re thrilled to work with him.”

Kaufman will appear at a handful of 9Health Fair locations this fall, offering live demos of simple ways to engage your children in easy and fun physical activity.
